

Cajun Ti Beau and the Cocodries

Never trust an alligator's smile! Young Ti Beau dons his snappy new Mardi Gras clothes for a walk through the swamp. Five alligators catch sight of Ti Beau's elegant attire and decide that he looks quite tasty. The clever boy figures that being alive is better than looking good, so he bargains away his new clothes until he's left in nothing but his conson. But each gator believes he is the handsomest, grandest, fanciest, swimmiest, spiffiest cocodrie in the bayou, and Ti Beau gets trapped by their loud argument. Can Ti Beau escape, or will he become the sauce piquant for the night's dinner? A French-to-English glossary and a recipe for Alligator Sauce Piquant are included in this trickster tale.
